isa Leno and Chris Mercier won decisive victories in the Tribal Council election, but only one vote separated incumbent Michael Langley and challenger Matthew Haller.

Following a recount on Saturday, Sept. 9, Haller was declared the winner with 585 votes to Langley's 584.

Langley, 56, was vying for his third consecutive three-year term on Tribal Council. He had been serving as Tribal Council secretary since September 2021.

"Congratulations to all of the candidates, especially Chris, Lisa and Matt," he said. "For Veronica and Chris, even choosing to run takes courage and is worthy of kudos. While it has been a demanding job, it has been an honor to serve our Tribe the last six years. I'm proud of what we accomplished. I will always wish for the best outcomes for the decisions this Tribal Council will be making. There is much too important work ahead to ever make it about anything other than good performance."

2018 – Tribal Council members, Tribal members and Tribal employees participated in a ceremony that blessed the future site of a fishing platform at Willamette Falls after receiving permission from the state to build the structure. Having a platform at the historic site in the Tribe's ceded lands had been a goal since 1983's Restoration, and was in negotiations with the state for two years.

2013 – Willamina Elementary fourth-graders would soon receive instruction in Grand Ronde Tribal history for the first time. The pilot project included several 40-minute lessons that would teach Willamina youth about Tribal history from time immemorial through Termination in the 1950s, Restoration in the 1980s and modern-day status as a sovereign nation. The curriculum was created after the Tribe signed a memorandum of understanding with the Willamina School District.

2008 – Spirit Mountain Casino was doing better than most other large businesses in a down economy. During an update at a General Council meeting, Acting General Manager Roy Rhode said despite high gas prices and lagging consumer confidence in the U.S. economy, the casino's net revenue was higher in 2008 than in 2007.

2003 – Tribal members re-elected Cheryle A. Kennedy, and elected Jack Giffen Jr. to serve on Tribal Council. The third- and fourth-place candidates, Jan D. Reibach and Mark Mercier, were headed for a recount because there was less than one percent between their vote counts.

1998 – Cultural Resources Department staff, members of the Culture Board and community-based group Seekers worked together to provide a variety of cultural materials for the public during the Tribe's Contest Powwow. These included an interactive Chinuk Wawa display, and some illustrations of old Tribal photographs. Additionally, an initial draft for the proposed cultural center and museum was available for public comment at the powwow.

1993 – Tribal nursing assistant Darlene Aaron was recognized for five years of working for the Tribe. Aaron noted that she had seen many changes in that relatively short period of time. "When I first began working for the Tribe, everyone worked in the Manor. There were only about 25 employees and the Health Clinic was only open one day per week," she said.

1988 – Tribal enrollment reached 2,351, according to Enrollment Director Margo George. "Congratulations to all of our new members," she said. "I have been working on a computer program to automate and update the enrollment records. The enrollment clerk, Beverly Smith, issued 45 (Tribal identification) cards at the powwow." George also reminded Tribal members to look into the enrollment status of their children, and said that if they hadn't received a roll number, they were likely not enrolled yet.

Haller, Langley result closest in Tribal Council election history

By Dean Rhodes

 $Publications\ coordinator$

The one-vote difference between challenger Matthew Haller and incumbent Tribal Council member Michael Langley during the Saturday, Sept. 9, election set a new benchmark as the closest race in Tribal Council election history.

After a recount, Haller received 585 votes to finish third while Langley tallied 584 votes and lost his seat on Tribal Council after serving two terms.

The previous record for closest race between third and fourth place during a Tribal Council election occurred in 2015 when Tribal Council member Jon A. George received two more votes than the late Steve Bobb Sr. - 434 to 432 - to capture a seat on Tribal Council.

A two-vote margin also occurred in 1997 when Val Grout edged Robert Haller 254-252 for the final seat on Tribal Council. Robert Haller is Matthew's grandfather. In 2016, Tribal Council member Denise Harvey edged Lisa Leno by three votes -557 to 554 – for a seat on Tribal Council. Merle Holmes also beat Merle Leno by three votes -72 to 69 – in 1991.

Senior Staff Attorney Deneen Aubertin Keller said that if a tie had occurred for the first time ever, the Election Ordinance would mandate that the Election Board ask whether one of the candidates wanted to withdraw. If neither did, a special runoff election would be held on the second Saturday in November.

Langley would have stayed on Tribal Council until the results of the runoff election were certified. In the event that neither of the candidates is an incumbent, the council seat would remain vacant until the runoff election winner is sworn in.

Matthew Haller becomes the 50th Tribal member to be elected to Tribal Council since 1983's Restoration. ■

Tribal Council selects Mercier for vice chair, Cherry as secretary

By Danielle Harrison

Smoke Signals editor

With just a week passing in between meetings, Tribal Council had a fairly light agenda on Wednesday, Sept. 13, with only three action items.

The shorter one-week period between meetings occurred because Tribal Council traditionally holds a meeting after new members are sworn into office.

Earlier in the day, incumbents Lisa Leno and Chris Mercier and first-time challenger Matthew Haller were sworn in for new three-year terms after taking the top three spots in the Sept. 9 election. Michael Langley, who served six years on Tribal Council, officially became a former Tribal Council member.

During the Tribal Council meeting, Mercier was re-appointed as vice chair and Michael Cherry was selected to serve as secretary. In other action, Tribal Council:

- Approved extending an environmental consulting services agreement for Portland Harbor cleanup efforts from one year to three years;
- Approved a master services agreement between the Tribe's Human Resources Department and UKG, Inc. for software and software support;
- Approved re-appointing Andy Jenness and Matthew Kirkland to three-year terms on the Spirit Mountain Gaming, Inc. Board of Directors, with terms expiring on Sept. 30, 2025.

In other business, Tribal Council approved an application for a U.S. Forest Service Siuslaw Pollinator Grant for up to $525,000 to help fund the Tribe's Native Plant Nursery expansion.

member of our Tribe my all, equally. I will do my best to help our Tribe continue to advance in a positive direction for the betterment of us as a whole. I simply can't thank you enough."

Leno, 54, won her third consecutive three-year term on Tribal Council, finishing first with 873 votes.

"I would like to thank our membership for your love and support, and allowing me to serve you for the next three years," she said. "I am committed to work hard with our people to address the issues that impact us all."

Mercier, 48, captured his seventh-term on Tribal Council and will tie former Chairman Reyn Leno as the second longest-serving Tribal Council member at the conclusion of his term in September 2026.

Mercier, who was first elected to Tribal Council in 2004, finished second with 602 votes.

"As always, I am grateful to be trusted by the members," he said. "But the votes indicate that folks want to see some form of change, and we need to be mindful of that moving forward."

Other challengers in this year's election were Veronica Montano, 37, the Tribe's Budget Coordinator and former manager of the Member Services Department; and Chris Bailey, 46, a Tribal Cultural Protection Specialist.

Both were first-time candidates. Bailey finished with 420 votes and Montano finished with 349.

"I want to thank all the people that supported me this year," Bailey said. "Though the results weren't what I was hoping for, I'm still looking forward to the future and will continue to provide service to our people in other ways. Congratulations to the winners and I am hopeful that they will lead us with wisdom and compassion."

"I would like to congratulate this year's winners," Montano said. "This was a great learning opportunity, and I appreciate all of the help that I received along the way. Most importantly, I want to say thank you to all of the Tribal members who supported me this year. I am beyond grateful for your support and encouragement. I would also like to say thank you to all of the other Tribal members who voted." This year marked the 10th consecutive year of single-digit candidates running for Tribal Council. The last time 10 or more candidates threw their proverbial hats in the ring was in 2013. Turnout was 29 percent with 1.295 ballots cast from 4.457 adult Tribal members. It marked the third year in a row that turnout dipped below 30 percent.

Spirit Mountain Casino Chief Executive Officer Camille Mercier, Chief Operating Officer Clint Johnson and Spirit Mountain Gaming Inc. Board Chairman Andy Jenness gave the first presentation of the 2023-24 General Council meeting cycle on Sunday, Sept. 10.

Mercier gave a 30-minute presentation in executive session and the trio then fielded 20 questions and comments from Tribal members in attendance.

Since the presentation was held in executive session, Smoke Signals cannot publish specific details.

In other action, Tribal Election Board member Michael Mercier delivered the Tribal Council election results from Saturday, Sept. 9, that saw two incumbents – Lisa Leno and Chris Mercier – re-elected to three-year terms. First-time challenger Matthew Haller secured the third seat, beating twoterm Tribal Council member Michael Langley by one vote.

The one-vote separation between candidates is the closest in an election since 1983's Restoration. The previous record for closest race between third and fourth place during a Tribal Council election occurred in 2015 when Tribal Council member Jon A. George received two more votes than the late Steve Bobb Sr. to capture a seat on Tribal Council.

The next General Council meeting will be held at 11 a.m. Sunday, Oct.

Clifford, 71, has helped guide the city of Springfield and Willamalane Parks in crafting a land acknowledgement. She also supported a mural focused upon Indigenous history in the mid-Willamette Valley and designed and organized the annual Red Dress Poetry in the Park event that honors missing and murdered Indigenous women.

"Marta has devoted her life's work to bringing awareness of Native American issues in and around the city of Springfield and strives to be a good caretaker of Kalapuya Illihi," said Stephanie Tabibian (Shoshone-Paiute Tribes of Duck Valley Indian Reservation), an education assistant director at the University of Oregon's College of Education, in her nominating letter, citing Clifford's work on Poetry in the Park held at Springfield's Heron Park.

Tabibian said that Clifford juggles her volunteer activities while also working a full-time job.

"Marta also collaborates with Willamalane, providing guidance on appropriate land acknowledgements and park signage, and conducting Kalapuya Talking Stones tours for staff. In addition to all this, and a full-time job, she is the Elder-in-Residence at the University of Oregon Theatre Department and the Native American and Indigenous Studies Academic Residential Community. Whenever there is a community discussion regarding making improvements for Indigenous and Tribal representation in Springfield, Marta is there – always willing to assist, teach and provide feedback. She leads with joy, empathy and compassion for all those around her."

In addition, Clifford and Theresa May, University of Oregon professor of Theatre Arts, co-founded the Illioo Native Theatre, which celebrates and showcases Native, First Nations and Indigenous dramatists and artists through productions, concert readings and workshops.

Casino seeking Marketplace vendors

Spirit Mountain Casino is seeking vendors for the upcoming Spirit Mountain Marketplace, which will celebrate Native American heritage, craftsmanship and community.

The one-time event, set for 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Oct. 13-14, is an opportunity to showcase handmade creations and network with like-minded individuals.

The Marketplace is seeking Native American and community members who create handmade products that are at least 80 percent crafted by hand or produced locally. To secure a place, vendors should contact Jeffrey Sittisuphachoke at 503-879-3893 to obtain details and confirm a spot as a vendor.

Fees, rules and guidelines will be available to sign, along with a table assignment, at 9 a.m. Friday, Oct. 13. Marketplace spots will be allocated on a first-come, first-served basis.

Vendor fee will be $30 and provides access to one table, one Flex linen, two chairs and a black linen to cover the table overnight. A second table will be available for an additional $10 fee.

The Marketplace will be located in the Events Center hallway with space for 36 vendor tables. Table placement will be determined through a lottery process on Friday, Oct. 13. Additional space up to 5 feet beside and in front of tables will be available for clothing racks.

In addition, vendors can temporarily park vehicles in the roundabout behind the hotel for unloading and loading between 9 and 10 a.m. and from 6 to 7 p.m., respectively.

Vendors also will need to comply with local health and safety regulations, display their goods professionally and maintain a clean, inviting booth with transparent pricing and outstanding customer service.

"We aim to create an inclusive and vibrant marketplace that honors the craftsmanship of Native American and local artisans," the casino said in a press release. "We hope these guidelines provide clarity and excitement as we prepare to host the Marketplace."

David Lewis writes histories of Willamette Valley Tribes

By Dean Rhodes

Publications coordinator

SALEM – Former Tribal Historian David Lewis sits inside the IKE Box Café, his ever-present laptop computer to his left.

He's just a few blocks from the state Capitol, which is adorned with an 8.5-ton bronze sculpture with gold leaf finish of an Oregon pioneer that honors the European settlers who poured into the Willamette Valley in the mid-19th century and stole Tribal peoples' land, displaced those Natives who survived disease and starvation to Reservations, and at times killed Tribal peoples for just trying to survive on what had been their ancestral homelands.

It's a disturbing history that is told well in Lewis' immensely readable new book, "Tribal Histories of the Willamette Valley," which will be released on Nov. 14 by Ooligan Press.

Although the old adage, sometimes attributed to English Prime Minister Winston Churchill, states that history is written by the victors, some 170 years after European settlers invaded the Willamette Valley and made it their own, the other side of the story is being told in greater depth and detail by Tribal descendants.

Lewis, 58, is an assistant professor of Anthropology & Indigenous Studies at Oregon State University in Corvallis and has been researching and writing about Willamette Tribal history for years.

His new 240-page book takes a deep dive into the separate stories of the numerous Tribes that eventually confederated and ended up at the Grand Ronde Indian Reservation in the mid-1850s.

Tribal Elder David Lewis has written a book titled "Tribal Histories of the Willamette Valley." The release date is Nov. 14.

"I dedicate this book to the Tribal People of Western Oregon, who deserve to be told the truth about their history," he writes at the beginning of the book.

The book also includes information that rewrites many of the facts currently told about the history of Willamette Valley Tribes. For instance, instead of eight people dying and eight children being born on the Trail of Tears march from Table Rock to Grand Ronde in early 1856, Lewis found that the actual number was only seven on both accounts, according to the journal of removal.

"After I left the Tribe back in 2014, I started doing a lot of research on Tribal history," Lewis says about the genesis of the book. "Not just at Grand Ronde, but all over ... all of the different Tribes of western Oregon."

From that research, he started writing the histories, eventually compiling more than 500 essays.

"So I decided to take those essays and just reformulate them into chapters in the book," Lewis says.

The essay approach makes "Tribal Histories of the Willamette Valley" imminently readable as people are able to consume the information in small bites and are not forced to read 20-page chunks of information in one sitting.

Lewis said he is hoping the book can be used in high school history classes as well as his own Kalapuya Studies courses taught at Oregon State.

"When I came into Grand Ronde, there really wasn't a good history of the Tribe," Lewis says. "So I developed that along with people like Eirik Thorsgard. We helped develop that history and since then I have been adding to it, adding more pieces to it. What I have discovered through my research is not just for my Tribe, but all the Tribes, they're not really well researched or written about. In fact, some of the histories may be wrong.

"I think (the book) fills in more of that history of colonization because most of the books about the Tribes are about either the Kalapuyas in the past or don't really follow the Tribes into the late 19th or early 20th century. I follow them into the events that were occurring in the midst of colonization and just after colonization, and what happens on the Reservation." Lewis' book paints a dismal picture of the first inhabitants of the Grand Ronde Indian Reservation. who were victims of federal government ineptitude and poorly treated. "The first year of the Oregon reservations was chaotic," he writes. "The expediency of creating the reservations to alleviate several wars was perhaps too quick and too complex for the federal government to respond with full support. ... The lack of preparation of the expenses needed for removal and care of so many Native people was apparent. The many problems created by a sudden change in the living environment for the tribes was also not well understood or anticipated. Few foresaw the problems with nutrition or illnesses, likely caused by exposing remote Indian groups to Tribes from regions hundreds of mile apart."

"It was really, really horrible how people were being treated," Lewis says, adding that around 500 Natives "disappeared" in the first few years of the Grand Ronde Indian Reservation. He thinks they either left the Reservation and re-assimilated into the settler culture, or they died from the strange food and harsh living conditions, such as having only a tent between them and the Coast Range winter.

He also draws an interesting through line from the Native Americans' loss of land and the accompanying intergenerational trauma to the continuing intergenerational poverty of Tribal peoples that continues to this day.

"Tribal people in Oregon today are commonly quite poor, unable to advance into the middle class," he writes. "The actions of the United States and its citizenry have continually impoverished the Tribes and their people for the past nearly 200 years. Few Native people own land, have access to enough land to practice their culture, or know the history of how their family got to their position.

"This was not the case for the settlers in Oregon. These settler families benefitted greatly from free land and labor for a pittance ... They built agriculture, industries, cities, and great amounts of wealth and power for themselves. The descendants who have retained wealth based on their land holdings and the wealth of their pioneer ancestors now have extensive resources that continue to benefit each generation."

Other interesting historical facts include that Indian Agent Joel Palmer was pressured out of his job because he was seen as too sympathetic to Native Americans' plight and that Indian agents had to travel to San Francisco to cash a federal bank draft to buy the supplies for the fledgling reservations because there was no bank in Oregon.

"Tribal Histories of the Willamette Valley" also features Greg Robinson (Chinook) artwork on the cover.

Ooligan Press is affiliated with Portland State University and staffed by students pursuing master's degrees in an apprenticeship program under the guidance of publishing professionals. "Tribal Histories of the Willamette Valley" is available for pre-order via Amazon and other book-selling sites for $24.95.

"The full history of those who have lived in the Willamette Valley since time immemorial is one that needs to be told," says Kerry Tymchuk, executive director of the Oregon Historical Society. "'Tribal Histories of the Willamette Valley' brings to light a heretofore largely untold story of courage and resilience. It should be required reading for all who want to understand the true history of Oregon."

Fund awarded 3,259 grants in 26 years

saria Haugland, who believed that prevention-based services dedicated to helping girls ages 10 to 18 make healthy life choices through empowerment, education and support were essential. She and her family remain involved with the organization in various ways.

The organization has three locations – Eugene, Junction City and Albany – where it provides after-school drop-in services, social-emotional learning activities, therapy, parent education and referrals.

The $50,000 grant from the Community Fund will go toward increased access to behavioral health resources for girls and teenagers at the Albany location through sitebased and school-based resources.

These services will include individual therapy, therapy groups, empowerment groups, classroom presentations for all youth, and after and non-school day activities and workshops. Services are offered on a sliding scale or free of charge, including at local school districts.

"We believe that cost should never be a barrier to any girl who wants to come here," Executive Director Laura Sanchez said. "That goes for our school district partnerships, too."

The organization opened its Albany location in 2022.

"There is a real unmet need for youth services there," Sanchez said. "My primary goal is to reach the kids who are the hardest to reach and we're looking at ways to make our programs more equitable in general."

Since most of the organization's funding comes through donations and grants, being a $50,000 beneficiary of the Community Fund is extremely helpful to achieving their mission, Sanchez said.

"I want to give a huge thank you to them for supporting our work," she said. "We can't do of it without funders like these. Specifically in Albany, we're still trying to get our foot in the door and let the community know who we are, so this grant is really important. ... There's a big benefit for the girls knowing there is a space just for them, and coming to a space that is open and welcoming. The hope is that all who come here feel hopeful, validated and safe."

Watchlist: 'Bad Press' trailer

(Editor's note: It is estimated that there are approximately 149 billion videos on YouTube, and the number continues to grow. Grand Ronde Tribal member and Social Media/Digital Journalist Kamiah Koch sifts through those myriad videos twice a month to recommend a worthwhile Indigenous video to watch. Follow her bimonthly recommendations and enjoy!)

By Kamiah Koch

Social media/digital journalist

Smoke Signals staff, two members of the Editorial Board and a Tribal Council member attended the Indigenous Journalists Association's annual conference in Winnipeg, Canada, in August.

One of the conference activities was a special screening of the documentary "Bad Press." To our surprise, the Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde and Smoke Signals received a shout-out in the film.

The film focuses on the Muscogee Nation's journey to a constitutional amendment establishing a free press for its Tribal news organization, Mvskoke Media, after the Tribe's Free Press Act was repealed abruptly under suspicious circumstances by the Muscogee National Council in 2018.

The documentary follows Angel Ellis, a Muscogee (Creek) Tribal member and Mvskoke Media journalist who advocates for a constitutional amendment securing freedom of the press for her Tribe.

During the documentary's trailer, text overlaying a map of America with the Tribal nations shaded in states, "Out of 574 federally recognized Tribes, only five have passed laws protecting freedom of the press."

In the trailer, Lenzy Krehbiel-Burton, a Cherokee Nation Tribal member and freelance reporter, talks about how censorship is not something you expect to hear about in America since the First Amendment of the Constitution protects freedom of speech and press. However, because Tribal nations have sovereignty, that free press protection from the First Amendment is not guaranteed on Tribal lands.

In the trailer, Krehbiel-Burton lists the Tribal nations with codified press protections: Navajo Nation, Cherokee Nation, Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde, Osage Nation and (only recently) Muscogee (Creek) Nation.

During the screening, journalists from those named Tribal nations let out "whoops" and cheers, including Smoke Signals staff and the present Editorial Board members.

Filming for the documentary started soon after the Muscogee Nation had its Free Press Act repealed in 2018, and during that time Mvskoke Media employees were instructed to provide a copy of the paper to the Tribal government leaders before it was published. Those leaders would then edit or remove any stories that they felt put the Tribe in a bad light, especially stories reporting on the unethical behavior of Tribal leadership, most notably cases of sexual harassment.

The documentary follows the many attempts to reinstate a free press law, culminating in a constitutional amendment vote, requiring 66.6 percent of eligible voters' votes. The movie had scenes of suspense and humor throughout, highlighting the uniqueness of Tribal law in America today.

Ellis sums up the importance of a free press with her blunt humor in the first few seconds of the trailer.

"What we cover is most important to Muscogee Creek people, but here I am reporting on news topics that maybe don't show my Tribe in the best light," Ellis said. "But do you want a friend who will lie to you and leave you walking out the door with a booger hanging out of your nose or toilet paper on your shoe? Or do you want a friend who will stop you and say 'Hey, check your face!"

WHAT IS HEAD LICE?

An insect found on the head, eyebrows and eyelashes of people. Head lice feed on human blood several times a day and live close to the human scalp.

WHO IS AT RISK?

Everyone. However, head lice is most common among pre-school children attending child care, grade school, and household members of children with head lice.

SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

- Tickling feeling or something moving in the hair
- Itching
- Irritability and difficulty sleeping; head lice are most active in the dark
- Sores on the head caused by scratching

HOW DO LICE SPREAD? Head lice are spread by direct contact with the hair of another person with head lice. Personal hygiene or cleanliness in the home or school has nothing to do with getting head lice

TREATMENT OPTIONS

- Lice medication that is available over the counter called pediculicide
- Wet combing mechanically removing the lice through combing of wet hair with a fine toothed comb every 3-4 days for two weeks
- Utilizing mayonnaise, petroleum jelly, olive oil, tub margarine and thick hair gel. Applying a thick coating of such agents to the hair/scalp left on overnight.

Most people give some signs that they are thinking about suicide. Some of the possible signs include:

- Feelings of hopelessness
- Feelings of rage, anger, or seeking revenge
- Acting reckless or doing risky activities without thinking
- Feeling trapped—like there's no way out
- Increasing alcohol or drug use
- Withdrawing from friends, family or usual activities
- Feeling anxious, agitated, being unable to sleep, or sleeping all the time
- Having dramatic mood changes
- Seeing no reason for living or having no sense of purpose in life
- Giving away their things
- Feeling that there's no one that cares about you

If you see these signs or a friend tells you that they are having these feelings, encourage that person to call 988 or get help with a mental health provider.

If you see someone:

- Saying they want to hurt or kill themselves
- Looking for ways to kill themselves: looking for pills, weapons, or other means
- Talking or writing about death, dying, or suicide

Get immediate help from a mental health provider or call 988.

TERO Worker of the Month August 2023

Name: Franklin Norwest Employer: Suulutaaq Position: Apprentice laborer

Franklin Norwest joined the TERO workforce almost one year ago. TERO has helped Franklin join the 737 Laborers Union out of Portland and he was soon referred out to a renowned company called Suulutaaq, an Alaska Native-owned company with employees working on the Interstate 205 Abernethy Bridge project, where Franklin is working now.

The I-205 project in Oregon City is the largest project that the TERO program has been involved in to date. Franklin, who is only 21, is now making a great name for himself as a top-notch hand in the heavy highway industry.

Since joining the 737 Laborers Union apprenticeship a year ago, Franklin has acquired an assortment of new skills, such as rebar experience, working with many different types of construction material and erosion control, along with many other labor-intensive tasks that he is asked to do.

Franklin's foreman had nothing but great things to say about him and that is what has earned him the August TERO Worker of the Month.

We asked Franklin what his thoughts were about the TERO program and how it helped him. Franklin said that it gave him an opportunity to excel in the construction field and gain some great experience in a lifelong career.

He also said that he would like to thank the local 737 and also the TERO program for helping him be a part of the great opportunities it has to offer. Franklin would also like to give a special thank you to the Suulutaaq family that have been so great to work with.

TERO, Suulutaaq and the local 737 union want to thank Franklin for his hard work and dedication, which has earned him August Worker of the Month. Great job, Franklin!!
