Snowstorm shutters Tribal campus for three days

By Sherron Lumley

Smoke Signals staff writer

inter weather arrived in Grand Ronde with snow, wind and freezing rain shuttering the Tribal campus from Tuesday, Jan. 16, through Thursday, Jan. 18.

Monday, Jan. 15, was a Tribal holiday in honor of Martin Luther King Jr. Day so offices were already closed.

The National Weather Service issued several flash freeze warnings ahead of the storm, predicting temperatures plummeting to below freezing and dangerous black ice for Yamhill County and most of Oregon.

With this advance notice, Tribal leadership made the decision to dismiss staff two hours early on Friday, Jan. 12, so they could get home safely.

By Saturday, a blanket of snow enveloped the hills and valley, soon followed by freezing rain that created a hard, glassy layer of ice, falling trees and treacherous roads.

The Tribe was ready with its Emergency Operations Plan, which covers all areas of response. Tribal Emergency Preparedness Coordinator Brandy Bishop kept in touch with the state Office of Emergency Management and the National Weather Service, conveying the information to the Tribal Interim General Manager Chris Leno.

Tribal Groundskeeper Nick Colton clears snow in a parking lot on the Tribal campus on Thursday, Jan. 18. Tribal offices were closed for three days in a row due to a snow and ice storm that affected the Willamette Valley area. Initially, the plan was to open offices at 10 a.m. Thursday, Jan. 18, but that was changed after the Willamina and Sheridan school districts closed for the day, and the conditions of the less-traveled roads were taken into consideration.

Tribal construction projects underway

By Sherron Lumley

Smoke Signals staff writer everal construction projects that will serve Tribal members are underway or nearing completion in Grand Ronde, from a modern health care clinic with a community kitchen and fish pit to solar-powered Elder housing and a new child development center.

"The visions that we put down on paper are now being realized," Tribal Council Chairwoman Cheryle A. Kennedy said during a December Facebook Live meeting. "We can welcome home our members." On a rainy January morning, Tribal Engineering and Planning Manager Ryan Webb walked through the new health care and vaccination clinic, located near the Tribal campus entrance. "Seeing each project come to life and then ultimately be used to provide a service to the membership is so rewarding," Webb said.

Funding includes $2.2 million from Indian Health Service, $1.75 million from the Indian Community Development Block Grant, $100,000 from Spirit Mountain Community Fund, $50,000 from Yamhill Community Care and $3 million from clinic revenues.

During a recent site visit. Webb pointed out architectural features such as indoor fir beams combined with exterior cedar salvaged from the 2020 Detroit Lake wildfire. The 8,400-square-foot interior includes a reception area with vaulted ceiling and children's play area, spacious medical and dental exam rooms, high-tech labs, a break room and administrative offices. Copper acorns catch rainwater as salmon stamped in the concrete appear to swim toward the 800-square-foot concrete patio and a covered, 700-square-foot fish pit area. The community kitchen is set up to accommodate streaming nutrition classes with offsite Tribal members. The Tribe hired contractor Triplett Wellman Inc. of Woodburn for this contract.

He discussed several of the Tribe's current projects, noting its success in securing federal and other grant funding to partially finance every project, up to 100 percent of the cost in some cases.

His team in Public Works includes Grant Program Manager Wendy Sparks, Grant Writer Stevie Geopfert and Grants Assistant

Dear Smoke Signals,

I read with sadness that Eldon Buddy Farlow has walked on. Many, many years ago, I had the honor and pleasure of representing the Llaneza-Farlow family in an attempt to get justice relating to Indian Mary Park down in Josephine County. I wish I could have done more for the family and I wanted to send my best regards to all.

Jack L. Schwartz Attorney-at-law Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear Smoke Signals,

Open letter to Tribal Council: I am writing to you today to let you know that my family and I strongly believe it is time to move lineal descent enrollment forward.

It is time to break the shackles of blood quantum requirements and reverse the unintended consequences of complicated enrollment policies of the past. It is time to honor the September advisory vote and move forward to implement the will of the membership by creating a simple lineal descendant enrollment standard. It is time to bring our direct descendants into our Tribe and encourage them to embrace our history and culture.

Your leadership now will resonate throughout generations to come.

Respectfully submitted, Mary Leith Roll No. 3164

Dear Smoke Signals,

Recently, I was chosen by Portland General Electric to receive a portable generator since I'm on the medical adaptation program. I first saw information about how to receive the generator on KGW 8 and filled out the form on the PGE website.

I was chosen to receive the generator since I have medications that need to be refrigerated and other medical devices that need electricity.

I also found out that after you plug in the generator and get it fully charged it can last up to 72 hours. Another plus is that you can purchase solar panels for the generator, which I'm going to do, and the generator is a "goal zero" and can be used inside the home safely.

You can run a refrigerator, microwave, medical devices and Wi-Fi, and set up your phone to run the generator as well as control the generator.

I'm sharing this information with you so that others know of a generator that they can safely use in the home without fear of suffering from carbon monoxide poisoning.

Respectfully submitted, Veronica Gaston Roll No. 2332

Food Bank news

The Grand Ronde Food Bank-iskam mək^hmək haws-is operated by Marion-Polk Food Share, which has been leading the fight to end hunger since 1987 because no one should be hungry.

Recipients of SNAP, TANF, SSI or LIHEAP assistance automatically qualify for assistance at the Grand Ronde Food Bank, 9675 Grand Ronde Road. No one will be turned away in need of a food box.

"We believe that everyone deserves to have enough to eat," Food Bank Coordinator Francene Ambrose says. "You are welcome to get a food box at each of our regular weekly distributions. No one will be turned away in need of a food box."

The Food Bank will hold February food box distributions from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Fridays. In addition, there is a light food box (mostly bread and produce) distribution from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Wednesdays.

People must check in 15 minutes before closing to receive a food box on both days. If you need immediate assistance, call 211 or visit 211info.org.

Those who are unable to pick up a food box can fill out an authorized representative form and that designated person can pick up a food box on your behalf. The authorization is good for one year.

The Food Bank continues to seek volunteers to help with repacking food, putting food on the shelves, handing out food boxes, end-ofmonth inventory and picking up food donations at area stores.

Call to ensure someone is available to assist. People also can sign up for a monthly email for the Food Bank calendar and events, as well as follow the Food Bank on Facebook.

The Food Bank is an equal opportunity provider. Contact Ambrose at 503-879-3663 or fambrose@marionpolkfoodshare.org for more information or to volunteer.

2019 - Three Tribal members - Jackie Many Hides, Duke Kimsev and Jim Holmes - served as stand-ins for their parents, who were going to be memorialized in bronze for their contributions to the Grand Ronde Tribe's Restoration. The three traveled to Portland's 3-D Foundry to pose for 3D body scanning and digital remodeling for the bronze memorial "Visionaries." It would pay tribute to the efforts of Tribal leaders Margaret Provost, Marvin Kimsey and Merle Holmes, who began working to restore the Grand Ronde Tribe in the early 1970s. After more than a decade of work, the Grand Ronde Reservation Act was signed into law on Nov. 22, 1983.

2014 - The ceremonial hunting season began with deer tags good for one month and the right to hunt the tags with a bow. Tribal members were entitled to new $25 gas vouchers for each harvest and a knife for all hunters who harvested their first animal. The knives had the Tribal logo and the year of the harvest on the blade.

2009 – The Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde received a $500,000 federal grant to expand the Health & Wellness Center dental clinic. The Department of Housing and Urban Development Indian Community Block Grant would help add six new dental chairs, two consultation rooms and three dental offices.

2004 – Tribal Elders who lived in Elder housing presented a Spirit Mountain Pendleton blanket and award to Tribal Elder Harvey Grout following the New Year's Day storm. He was out every day throughout the weeklong ice and snowstorm, shoveling the sidewalks and driveways for those living in the Tribe's Elder Housing development. "If it wasn't for Harvey, I wouldn't even be able to visit my next door neighbor," Tribal Elder Anna Hannan said. Thanks to Grout, residents were able to pick up items including medicine and groceries. "I was raised to help others whenever I could," he said. "It's the Indian way."

1999 – The grand opening celebration of Spirit Mountain Lodge included Tribal Council, community members and other guests who toured the inside of the lodge, casino and Hall of Legends. Tribal Council member Val Grout gave an opening blessing. Spirit Mountain Board of Directors Chairman Mike Larsen said it was a wonderful day for the Tribe and the community. "I want to give thanks to the people who gave us their support to build here," Tribal Council Chair Kathryn Harrison said. "Not only our own people but the community as well. I hope when the future generations take over, they will have good things to say about us. Because then, we will be the ancestors."

1994 – As the Tribe continued to grow, different departments adopted new programs or expanded existing ones. The Social Services Department enacted a program patterned after a state program to assist Tribal members in finding employment or developing skills to meet future goals. The Tribe applied for a grant to fund the program. "We offer help with career planning, extended schooling, retraining for a position or working on getting a GED," JOBS Coordinator Carmen Mercier said. "Whatever barriers a client is facing, I help that person work through them one step at a time." 1989 – The Tribe held an open house for its new youth treatment center in Keizer, Nanitch Sahalie. The facility would be used as a youth residential treatment center for American Indian youth in the Pacific Northwest who needed substance use disorder care. The Tribe worked with Indian Health Service, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Rep. Les AuCoin, Sen. Mark Hatfield, Northwest Portland Area Indian Health Board and other Oregon Tribes in planning the treatment center. Tribal Chairman Mark Mercier provided opening comments and approximately 100 visitors attended the open house.

- TERO Commission meets at 10 a.m. the first Tuesday of the month in the Employment Services building. Chair: Russell Wilkinson.

Health and Human Services admiral visits Great Circle Recovery Portland

Contributed photo

From left, Tribal Council Chairwoman Cheryle A. Kennedy, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Assistant Secretary for Health Adm. Rachel L. Levine, Tribal Health Services Executive Director Kelly Rowe and Great Circle Recovery Operations Director Jennifer Worth met during Levine's visit to the Tribe's Great Circle Recovery medication assisted treatment clinic in Portland on Thursday, Jan. 18. Visiting Great Circle is part of Levine's efforts to connect with Indian County and learn more about the work Tribes are doing to combat substance use disorder.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Assistant Secretary for Health Adm. Rachel L. Levine visited the Tribe's Great Circle Recovery medication assisted treatment clinic in Portland on Thursday, Jan. 18, as part of her efforts to connect with Indian County and learn more about the work Tribes are doing to combat substance use disorder.

Originally, Levine was planning to visit the Grand Ronde campus as well as the Portland clinic, but a recent winter storm that blanketed the region curtailed the visit.

"It was a great honor to have Admiral Levine visit Great Circle Recovery in Portland to discuss the many great programs and services the Tribe has created to improve and support health and wellness," Tribal Health Services Executive Director Kelly Rowe said.

Levine met with the Tribe specifically to learn about its health and wellness programs that address the opioid epidemic, social determinants of health, gender affirming care and other public health diseases that are affecting American Indians/Alaska Natives at rates higher than other populations. "We toured the Great Circle Recovery building and discussed how our program there and in Salem is different than other opioid treatment programs, and also shared information about our new public health/vaccination clinic, shelter villages, community transitions Program, Grand Ronde Health & Wellness Center, Adult Foster Care, and tush lamatsin (good medicine) programming," Rowe said.

Tribal Council Chairwoman Cheryle A. Kennedy was in attendance for the visit, braving the wintry conditions to drive from her home in Dallas to Portland. There, she was joined by Great Circle Recovery Operations Director Jennifer Worth and Rowe.

"I was very pleased with the visit," Kennedy said. "We talked about what was happening and the need for services. ... That was the nature of the visit. She (Levine) hasn't been out to Indian Country a lot and wanted to acquaint herself with our services. I was very pleased we were recommended as a site to be toured and it was a great to share that the Tribe is working very hard to provide a full complement of services."

Kennedy, who served as the first Tribal Health Director, said she is proud that the Tribe has been expanding its substance use disorder treatment services in recent years from traditional 12-step programs to include detox, residential treatment, outpatient treatment and prevention. "We have all of those stages and will be opening the detox center later in 2024," she said. "I was glad the admiral was there and Kelly did a wonderful job showing her the facilities."

We want to hear from you!

Watchlist: 'Why ''Star Wars'' was dubbed into the Navajo Language'

(Editor's note: It is estimated that there are approximately 149 billion videos on YouTube, and the number continues to grow. Grand Ronde Tribal member and Social Media/Digital Journalist Kamiah Koch sifts through those myriad videos twice a month to recommend a worthwhile Indigenous video to watch. Follow her bimonthly recommendations and enjoy!)

Native Americans dressed as C-3PO, Princess Leia and stormtroopers settle into their cars as the sun is setting on the Navajo Reservation.

"Ladies and gentleman who are listening in your cars this evening here at the drive-in theater, the Navajo language is on a comeback," Navajo Nation President Jonathan Nez said over the radio, as he introduced the feature film of the evening: The Navajo-dubbed version of "Star Wars."

PBS published a video in November sharing the innovative ways the Tribe is preserving its language.

"It's a great deal for me because my grandparents can see this movie," Geri Hongeva, wearing a C-3PO shirt, said. "There are a lot of Elders in our community where Navajo is the only language known."

To one Indigenous "Star Wars" fan, the movie mirrors some aspects of Native culture. Having it in a Native language amplifies that.

"When I heard that folks were going to do Episode IV in Navajo language, it was a dream that came true," Navajo Tribal member James Bilagody, dressed up at the Grand Moff Tarkin character, said. "The teachings, like Yoda, would say things that I heard when I was a little boy. The connection was strong."

The movie was shown on a giant drive-in movie screen on May 4, 2023, also known to "Star Wars" fans as, "May the fourth be with you." The date has become a pop culture holiday, using a play on words celebrating the "Star Wars" phrase, "May the force be with you."

The PBS videos shows Tribal members enjoying the film dubbed in Navajo, with subtitles in English for translation.

Navajo Tribal member and Navajo Nation Museum employee Manny Wheeler was the "Jedi-mind" behind the Navajo version of "Star Wars."

According to the PBS video, Wheeler auditioned hundreds of Navajo to voice act the scenes in Navajo. Some of the voice actors came to the screening in character.

"The force and the universe is all interconnected," Wheeler said. "When you put that in the Navajo language, especially for an Elder to hear that and be thinking, 'Yeah, of course.' It's not just a movie, that's stuff we really believe."

Although dubbing this movie in Navajo made it more accessible for Elders, it also demonstrates most of the remaining Navajo speakers are older. Like many Tribes, they fear the Navajo language could be lost if younger generations don't learn to speak it.

According to the video, before 1492 there were more than 300 Native

2023 and is expected to take a year.

Tribal Council approved contractor Triplett Wellman Inc. to construct the 26,000-square-foot child development center next to the gym on the Tribal campus.

Tribal funding of $6.5 million combined with $6.5 million of federal American Rescue Plan Act funds, $2 million from nonprofits and $1 million in federal grants will finance the project.

The one-story building will have 12 classrooms, 16 administrative offices, a commercial kitchen, large community room, outdoor play areas, break room, restrooms and support areas.

Creekside Elder Housing: These newly constructed Tribal Elder housing units are located at Grand Ronde Road and Creekside Drive, behind existing Elder housing. Twelve duplexes (two housing units each) are fitted with solar energy panels and battery backup storage.

Eighteen of the units are market rate and six will be subsidized.

The $7.19 million project was funded with 80 percent Tribal dollars and 20 percent federal grant funds.

A grand opening for the project was held on Wednesday, Jan. 24. See the sidebar for a related story.

Wind River Apartments, phase three: The design phase is scheduled to be finished this summer with construction to begin soon after. There will be up to 45 units which are a mix of one- and two-bedrooms within 10 apartment buildings.

"The design and construction cost is estimated to be around $12.5 million, currently all Tribal funds, however we will be applying for grants to help with the cost of this project," Webb said.

Located adjacent to the Tribe's Housing Department offices at 28450 Tyee Road, the solar-ready designs provide the option to add solar panels with Energy Trust of Oregon.

Electric vehicle charging stations: Electric vehicle chargers will be added to campus this year thanks to a $700,000 grant from the Oregon Department of Transportation's Carbon Reduction Program.

Open house event held at Creekside Elder site

Grand Ronde's newest housing option for its Elders will soon be ready for occupancy.

The 12-duplex, 24-unit Creekside Elder Housing site, located at Grand Ronde Road and Creekside Drive, has been under construction since September 2021.

A blessing and open house was held on Wednesday, Jan. 24, under a rainy sky. It began with a prayer by Tribal Council Chairwoman Cheryle A. Kennedy and drum song led by Tribal Council member Jon A. George, Cultural Education Coordinator Jordan Mercier, Cultural Advisor Bobby Mercier and Family Support Specialist Santiago Atanacio.

Kennedy thanked the Elders Committee, Tribal Engineering and Planning Manager Ryan Webb, interim General Manager Chris Leno, Housing Department Manager Shonn Leno and others for helping to bring the project to fruition.

Other Tribal Council members in attendance included Secretary Michael Cherry, Brenda Tuomi, Denise Harvey and Lisa Leno. Former Tribal Council member Candy Robertson also attended.

"I want to say back in the day when I was Executive Health Director...all of us worked together on what to do about long-term health," Kennedy said. "So, those seeds were planted and all of the design was done with our input. It's been a long time but I'm so pleased this all came about."

Webb said it was hard to put into words what the day meant to him.

"When you hear Cheryle's words, and the drums and prayers, to stand in front of these homes today is truly rewarding," he said. "One of the reasons I wanted to come to the Tribe is to be a part of projects like this. It's overwhelming and humbling. I think these are amazing homes and they're going to be great for our Elders."

In addition to the visible solar panels on every roof and battery backup units in every garage, the less visible energy efficient perks are built into the homes, which include increased wall and attic insulation, and triple-pane windows. Webb said the windows also help with noise reduction.

"We want to make them as comfortable for the Elders as possible," he said.

Other features in the 1,100-square-foot homes include energy efficient appliances such as refrigerators, washers and dryers, and a heat pump instead of a traditional water heater, which uses energy from the building itself.

"We've gone through Energy Trust of Oregon and through their modeling these are all net zero homes, so over the course of the year, tenants should pay next to nothing in utility bills," Webb said.

Eighteen of the units are market rate and six will be subsidized.

The units should be ready for occupancy in early March. The Housing Department is currently finalizing the tenant move-in list and is planning to move tenants into the homes in small groups.

tain Casino revenues.

Phase one infrastructure and utilities funding includes close to $2 million in federal and $500,000 in Tribal funding. Phase one home construction funding comes from a $1.5 million state grant and Tribal funding of close to $6.9 million.

"The Tribe will be reimbursed on this funding when it sells the homes," Webb said.

Multi-use path from Grand Ronde Road to Spirit Mountain Casino: The Tribe received a $206,000 grant from the Oregon Department of Transportation's Community Paths Program for a feasibility study for a pedestrian/bike connection between Grand Ronde Road and Spirit Mountain Casino.

Resident recreation center: Design is underway for a new 20,000-square-foot building across from Tribal Housing Department offices using $1 million in Indian Health Plan funding. Community input meetings are coming in the near future and construction will begin once the design phase is complete. tumwata village: The Tribe purchased the former Blue Heron Paper Mill in Oregon City, a 23-acre property located by Willamette Falls, in 2019 for $15.25 million. The property is undergoing cleanup that has included the removal of 24 structures so far. The next phase of demolition will include the administration building at the entrance to the site, pending demolition permits from Oregon City. Road construction improvements are set to begin this year, Webb said.

The Tribe has a work plan formed with the EPA and Oregon Department of Environmental Quality. Construction is due to start this summer.

"For the EPA Brownfield Grant, we will continue to complete environmental remediation tasks under our work plan with EPA and Oregon DEQ," Webb said. "This work will likely include continued subsurface investigation work as well as removal of (contamination) from underlying soils. For the congressional funding grant, we are currently designing the infrastructure and utilities for phase one of site redevelopment work."

Language education building: The $3.95 million, 6,600-squarefoot building has six classrooms with doors that open to nature, office space, a break room, restrooms and an outdoor play area.

It is located behind the existing Education Department complex on the Tribal campus and was paid for through a combination of Tribal, federal and grant funding.

Fire Department picked up some staff to get them to essential jobs

"We have shelter plans in place, which include the gym and Elder Activity Center," Bishop said. "They were not activated because there was no power loss, but we always have them ready. We are geared to take care of the whole community with Tribal warming shelters for our Tribal population. We make an effort to get out to Elder Housing and partner with Facilities to take care of the needs of Elders, such as clearing snow and ice or delivering meals if needed."

She added that the Tribal Fire Department picked up some staff members to get them to their essential jobs at the Adult Foster Care lodges. Emergency Services Chief Steve Warden said there were "very few" serious incidents because of several advance warnings of the impending storm. "There were no exposure cases here from people being out in the cold, and it was remarkable that people were driving slowly and carefully and there was no huge spike in accidents," he said. Beginning in the pre-dawn hours on Thursday, Jan. 18, Tribal Facilities employees worked to clear walkways around buildings and removed snow from parking lots.

sure we have enough coverage for everyone," he said. "I'm very proud of my staff being able to come in and work."

Finance department staff also came in despite offices being closed. With payday looming on Friday, Jan. 19, Payroll Administrator Michelle Peterson, Assistant Controller Trish Squires, and Staff Accountexted employees campus closure updates throughout the week after emails were sent out.

Telecommunications Administrator Mark Scheeler said it's normal for a slight delay to occur between the two, since the alert is created only after the information about delays and closures becomes available and is approved by Tribal Council.

Meanwhile, Spirit Mountain Casino, led by Chief Executive Officer Camille Mercier, remained open to the public with some employees staying in the lodge rather than risk driving the hazardous roads.

"With the adverse weather challenges, Spirit Mountain overcame operational challenges thanks to our team members' hard work and dedication," she said. "Spirit Mountain provided lodging to our team members, ensuring their safety while keeping the property open to those seeking food, shelter and comfort." Oregon Gov. Tina Kotek declared a state of emergency on Thursday, Jan. 18, after the storm left a wake of widespread damage, power outages and the death of at least 13 people. "Now we are heeding the call from additional counties to escalate," she said. A low temperature of 15 degrees was recorded in Grand Ronde on Saturday, Jan. 13. By Monday, Jan 15, the high was 30 degrees locally, and by Friday, Jan. 19, morning temperatures remained above freezing and most employees returned to campus.

However, with a light snow continuing to fall and large chunks of ice sliding off the roof of the Tribal Governance Center, the planned two-hour delay was for the entire day.

Leno thanked the entire maintenance team and security in an email Thursday, for working so diligently in removing snow and ice from the Tribal campus.

"Preparing (the) campus has been a challenge...but I want to put out a special thank you to all of those that have worked so diligently this morning to try and accommodate a 10 a.m. opening," he said. "Kudos to the entire maintenance team, including security. Hopefully their work will lead to better conditions when we return to work tomorrow."

Throughout the duration of the Tribal campus closure, a few employees either braved the bad roads or never left work at all. Tribal Security Supervisor Roel Hernandez stayed onsite throughout the storm, sleeping only briefly at the Elder Activity Center.

"I decided to stay here to make

Bates made the trek into the office.

"We really do care that everyone gets paid on time to be able to buy groceries and pay bills," Peterson said, who navigated her Ford Bronco over downed trees to reach Grand Ronde from Falls City.

By Friday morning, Jan. 19, road conditions were greatly improved as the big melt began.

Thanks to Thursday's plow work, by Friday morning the parking lots and Tribal campus roads were cleared of all snow and ice.

"We started at 6:50 a.m. to clear the walkways and parking lots for people," Tribal Groundskeeper Nick Colton said Thursday.

Wearing an orange hoodie as his only protection against the elements, four hours later he was still plowing the parking lots, removing large amounts of snow and ice buildup.

Tribe is a recipient of $2 million Indian Health Service grant

The Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde is one of 15 Tribal recipients of an Indian Health Service grant through the federal Health and Human Services department.

The Tribe received $2 million, which can be used to invest in construction, expansion of modernization of health care facilities.

"Tribal partners need access to culturally appropriate, quality health care, including preventative services for chronic diseases," HHS Secretary Xavier Becerra said. "To help meet that need, HHS is investing in the construction, expansion and modernization of small ambulatory health care facilities. For nearly a quarter-century, HHS has been partnering with Tribes and Tribal organizations to ensure all communities have access to the care they need and deserve. Our ongoing support for the...program ensures this vital work keeps making a difference."

The IHS Small Ambulatory Program is expanding access to various outpatient services for patients, including offering new services, building on existing services and upgrading outdated facilities.

Ninety-five percent of Tribally operated health care facilities provide primarily ambulatory services. These services include preventative care for chronic diseases such as diabetes and also provide increased access to culturally appropriate, quality health care.

Winter supplements keep you healthy

Winter is upon us so give your body the extra care to help fend off winter sickness. Supplement healthy eating and seasonal vaccines with some of the most recommended vitamins and elements to maintain health and boost your immune system.

Vitamin B is vital for metabolic function including energy production, proper functioning of the nervous system and rebuilding of muscle and skin. Vitamin B12 is not available in plants, so if someone is a vegetarian, they are likely to be low in this. Vitamin B12 deficiency can cause a number of serious health problems and has been associated with seasonal affective disorder and other depressive symptoms.

Zinc is a mineral that helps boosts the body's natural defenses. It supports metabolism and improves immune function. It helps maintain healthy skin, nails and hair.

Omega-3 fish oil supports your brain, heart and vision. These vitamins have been linked to lowered risk of cardiovascular disease by reducing triglycerides and lowering blood pressure. Omega-3s are also important for brain memory, eye health and fighting depression.

Deficiencies in omega-3s can cause problems like fatigue, poor memory, dry skin, mood swings, depression and poor circulation.

Fish is the best food source of omega-3. Other food sources include nuts (particularly walnuts). A simpler way to ensure you get enough is to take a supplement.

Vitamin D is so important for bone strength because our bodies can't absorb calcium without the presence of vitamin D. The vitamin also supports immune health, muscle function and brain cell activity.

Most foods don't have naturally occurring vitamin D, although the food industry has chosen to fortify some common items like milk and cereal with this vitamin. Vitamin D is also present in fatty fish.

The biggest way we get our vitamin D is when our skin synthesizes it. Sometimes in the summer that is sufficient, but in the winter we don't get enough sunlight. Since it is difficult to get vitamin D from food alone, and we have limited sunshine in the winter, it is often recommended to take a supplement in order to avoid a vitamin D deficiency.

Vitamin C plays a role in supporting your immune system. Although a vitamin C boost may not stop all colds completely, the U.S. National Institutes of Health states that people who "regularly take a vitamin C supplement may experience a shorter cold or milder symptoms." Also, vitamin C helps control infections and heal wounds. Bananas and citrus fruits are good sources of vitamin C.

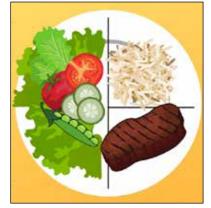

According to the National Institutes of Health, the recommended daily allowance of vitamin C for adults is 90 milligrams for males and 75 milligrams for females. The upper limit is 2,000 milligrams. ■

Affects of cannabis exposure

The cannabis plant contains more than 100 compounds classified as cannabinoids. Une of the compounds is tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), which is impairing or mind-altering. Marijuana products that contain THC can have health risks regardless of how they are used (for example smoked or eaten) because THC is impairing and can affect memory, attention, decision-making and risk-taking. Children can be affected although they themselves do not use cannabis. THC crosses the placenta and enters the fetal bloodstream, potentially causing future developmental problems. Additionally, THC can be passed to infants through secondhand smoke. Studies have shown that using cannabis during pregnancy can lead to a variety of negative outcomes for both the mother and the developing fetus. According to the CDC, using marijuana during pregnancy can lead to low birth weight, premature birth and developmental problems. A study by the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health (CAMH) and the University of Toronto found that infants prenatally exposed to cannabis are more likely to be born pre-term, have a low birth weight and require neonatal intensive care. Prenatal cannabis use has also been linked to an increased risk of major congenital anomalies and small-for-gestational age babies. Research suggests that using marijuana while pregnant could be linked to problems with attention, memory, problem-solving skills and behavior in children later in life.

Healthy hearts start in childhood

It's true, healthy hearts start in childhood with healthy practices. The same things that we hear in adulthood about heart health is valid in childhood: Be active, eat healthy and maintain a healthy weight. Encourage children of all ages, even very young, to be active. Join a team, walk, play age-appropriate games. Set media free times and encourage outdoor play as much as possible.

You can use the native plate model for healthy eating. That means eating lots of vegetables, with smaller quantities of grains and proteins. Offer water rather than other drinks which may be loaded with sugar and chemicals. When children are offered healthy foods from a very young age they will develop a "taste" for it.

Since we all have an inborn preference for sugary and salty foods, pay particular attention to snack foods including all kinds of chips, sugary drinks and sweets. These snacks provide "empty calories" with little nutritional value. Anyone who has ever tried these foods can tell you how addictive they are. We can't stop our kids from eating these completely but if they are not it the house they (and we) are less likely to eat them.

When children develop healthy patterns and habits at a young age, they are more likely to remain healthy even into older age. A combination of regular activity and healthy eating is a great beginning point for lifelong health. If you model healthy eating and staying active your kids are more likely to practice these behaviors. Your actions speak louder than words. ■

Building healthy relationships

The foundations of a healthy relationship include:

Communication: Even when you don't agree, both partners need to be able to share opinions and perspectives without feeling judged or shamed. Each person should feel safe and heard when expressing needs. Tell your partner how you feel and make an effort to talk things through.

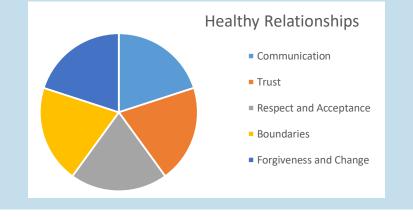

Trust: Building trust takes time and communication. It allows couples to be vulnerable with one another knowing that they can rely on the other person.

Respect and acceptance: Recognizing that each person in the relationship has a different personality, traits and needs. Neither person compromises who they are. Encouraging your partner to spend time with other friends and to take part in activities that they enjoy is a good way to express respect.

Boundaries: Having boundaries is like drawing a line. One side has the things you are okay with and the other side, those that you are not okay with, don't feel ready for or that make you uncomfortable. This line looks different for everyone. Setting boundaries lets your partner understand your needs. You are allowed to put your needs before someone else's needs, especially if their needs make you uncomfortable. Forgiveness and change: We all make mistakes in how we treat others, especially in close relationships. We need to acknowledge those mistakes, ask for forgiveness and commit ourselves to not repeat the offense. Wanting to be with someone is part of developing as a person. But starting a relationship will not fix other problems in your life like loneliness, feeling sad, or needing something new and shiny. Getting into a relationship should be all about you and the other person, rather than just the idea of having a boyfriend or a girlfriend. Sources: journey woman & youth.gov

It is recommended that pregnant women avoid using marijuana in any form both because of harm to themselves but also to the fetus.
